Funds raised at the Bar Fund Benefit will go to CASA's new Juvenile Justice Program.

For 40 years CASA has provided highly trained volunteers to be the "voice for the child" in foster care dependency hearings. As a result, 100% of youth with a CASA volunteer graduate from high school or earn a GED, although only 70% of foster youth overall in Contra Costa County do. CASA also provides therapy to foster youth who are not eligible for MediCal-funded mental health services. Realizing that 70% of youth in the juvenile justice system have had contact with the child welfare system, CASA is starting a program to provide our services to these youth to help them comply with probation requirements and to ensure they complete their education. Foster care and the juvenile justice system are often the entry points to homelessness, severe mental illness, and prison. With your help we can support our youth in becoming successful young adults.
